

Photos of Benches

The following happened when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited the Rungna Water Park under construction.

While explaining the method of installing lockers, he said to the officials: A few days ago when I looked round the changing room built beside the water slide, I designed a double bench with coat hangers on my pocketbook. I was afraid you did not have a correct understanding. Today I brought some photos of them for you.

The officials looked back on the day. That day he explained: In case double benches with coat hangers are installed here, they would be convenient for users, as they can sit with their backs against each other to easily wear socks and hang their clothes on them. And it would be possible to make more efficient use of the changing room.

They looked at the photos. They were not just the photos showing the forms of benches but those telling of his benevolent love for people.
