

Paying Deep Attention to Fittings

One November day in 2015, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un came to a subway station to oversee the trial operation of a prototype subway train made by the Kim Jong Thae Electric Locomotive Complex.

While looking around the compartment of the subway train, he turned his eyes on the seat signs.

They were for the old and disabled, pregnant women and baby mothers.

In fact, the signs were posted according to the instructions of Kim Jong Un. One month ago, he saw the prototype subway train and stressed the need to make and install all its fittings in a perfect way in terms of aesthetics and practicality.

Looking at the signs for a while, he said the seats for the old and disabled were marked separately as he had instructed, but their colours remained unchanged.

Touching a chair, he said the folding chairs should be placed in the compartment so that a trolley or a baby carriage could be parked, and that it would be advisable to set the folding chairs in a certain section rather than in all parts.

That day, he said it would be recommended to set Opla chairs which are good for the white-collar workers.

Thanks to the meticulous care of Kim Jong Un who paid attention even to the fittings of a subway train for more convenient and cultured life of the people, the seats for the old and disabled had different colours from ordinary seats and Opla chairs were set in the compartments.
