

Social and National Traits

The following happened one March day in 2015 when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited the Pyongyang Old People's Home under construction.

After feasting his eyes on the construction site for a while, he said: We should build the Pyongyang Old People's Home as a model for other provinces to follow, so that the old people can live happily free from any worries. All the old people's homes in the country should be built so well that the elderly people can spend their remaining years in comfort. We should make sure that they lead a worthwhile life, enjoying public respect as the revolutionary forerunners and seniors under the concern of the Party, state and society.

The officials were excited, looking up to him who indicated the ways to building the old people's home well, busy as he was with state affairs.

That day he stressed the need to make it social and national traits to take good care of the elderly.

True to his lofty intention of loving the people most, the officials made up their minds to thoroughly apply it to their work and practice.
