

Happiest News

In April 2001 Chairman Kim Jong Il visited a fish farm.

It was early in the morning, and the farm looked like a park in a valley, with new ponds teeming with rainbow trout.

He was all smiles, his eyes roaming over those ponds in tiers and the surrounding scenery.

After a long while, he said:

Now we have a sure guarantee for realizing President Kim Il Sung's wish to provide the people with enough fish. This has proved in practice that fish farming is a highly profitable industry and the fastest way to ensure plenty of freshwater fish for the people all the year round.

An official told him that rainbow trout were supplied to the people on the occasion of the Day of the Sun, and that they were very thankful for the benevolent measure.

Kim Jong Il beamed, saying that it was the happiest news he had ever heard.

Officials realized once again that his greatest joy was in bringing substantial benefits to the people and being told that they were pleased about them.
