

Worthwhile Visit

One day in November several years back, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited a fishery station.

Its officials felt surprised and sorry rather than happy.

As it was late November, the weather was very fitful with strong wind and rough waves in the sea.

Making the rounds of the station, Kim Jong Un learned in detail about its fishing and management situation.

Though they had longed to meet him even in a dream, the officials felt sorry for him as he visited their workplace on such a day when sleet was falling and even fishing boats were evacuated to the safe waters.

However, Kim Jong Un said: Today I made a worthwhile visit. I will continue to make such a trip no matter how long it might be and how rugged the road might be.

The officials realized once again that thanks to the devoted efforts of Kim Jong Un, who regards every manner of toil for the good of his country and people as his pleasure, the happy and bright future would be in store for the people.