

A Dear House for Learning Knowledge

One June day in 2014, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un looked round the Ssuk Island under development.

The island was untidy with construction in full swing, but he went round every nook and cranny of the construction site.

That day, he said: An indoor football stadium was planned to be built here before, but it does not suit our country's reality. In order to develop ours into a world-class power, we should make all the people well-versed in science and technology. I have decided to turn this island, associated with the leadership exploits of President Kim Il Sung, into a base for disseminating sci-tech knowledge to all the people across the country. We should build a sci-tech complex to be a structure perfectly reflecting our Party's idea of prioritizing science and technology and a dear house for all the people, including scientists, technicians, researchers and students, to come and study to their heart's content.

The officials realized the intention of Kim Jong Un who inspected the rugged construction site with an earnest desire to prepare all the working people as intelligent workers and developers of science and technology and develop the country into a sci-tech power as soon as possible.

Looking at the banks of the Taedong River, Kim Jong Un continued: The sci-tech complex to be built on the Ssuk Island will become another springboard for our country to beat the world. I am very pleased to think of it.

The officials pictured in their mind the magnificent appearance of the sci-tech complex to be built as a dear house for learning knowledge according to the grand ambition of the great fatherly leader.
